

Eight thousand dollars, win, lose or draw, is the sum to be received by Billy Papke, the Illinois thunderbolt, for his meeting with Stanley Ketchel on Thanksgiving day. Pretty good purse, considering the fact that the men have met twice, Papke being knocked out at the first meeting and Ketchel at the second. To a man up a tree it would look as though Papke is using his title for all it is worth.

The dispatches announce that "Wild Bill" Donovan will not pitch for the Detroit team next season, and that New York is after his release.

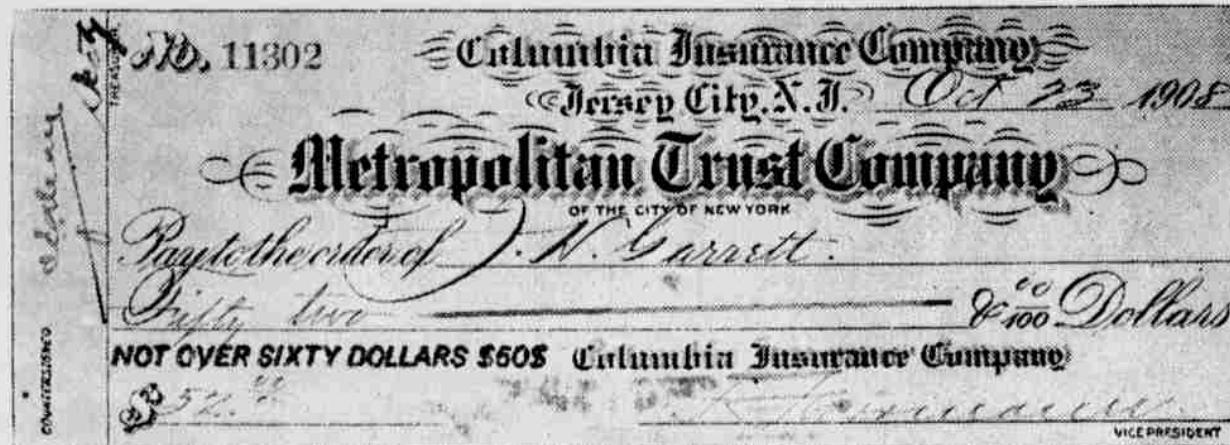

At the New Orleans races the admission fee is $1.50, and a man can get action on his money, all bets being registered, the amount of the wager being deposited with one of the fifty clerks employed by the New Orleans Jockey club, who will cash the winning tickets at the close of each race.

WERE YOU THERE?

Were you at the Louvre election night? That was only a starter of the many Bohemian entertainments planned by the management for the different gala occasions of the year. It was merely another indication of the fact that the best people in Salt Lake appreciate a fine restaurant, where besides the privilege of selecting from an unequalled menu of the season's delicacies, and a wine list second to none, they may enjoy the Bohemian atmosphere of such a place, with the music and lights and all else that go to make up such an evening of pleasure. Under the splendid management, whose extra effort made the event possible, the Louvre was the very center of attraction for those who wished to be entertained while hearing the election returns, and the annual event will in the future be anticipated with no little pleasure by the crowds who enjoyed this innovation Tuesday night.
